Arrowstreet's design of the L.L. Bean Hunting & Fishing Store received an Honorable Mention in Environmental Design & Construction's annual Excellence in Design awards. The award recognizes buildings that demonstrate a commitment to green building and sustainable design.

Sustainability and sensitivity to the environment were key factors in Arrowstreet's design, including the use of salvaged materials, minimizing construction waste, and energy efficiency. The store recently received LEED silver certification by the USGBC.

"Arrowstreet's design for the new L.L. Bean Hunting and Fishing Store was inspired by L.L. Bean's commitment to outdoor lifestyles and environmental activism," said Sean Selby, architect for the project at Arrowstreet. Located adjacent to the flagship store in Freeport, Maine, Arrowstreet modeled the new store after a traditional Maine hunting lodge.

Arrowstreet provides architecture, planning, interior design, and graphic design services. The firm is among the top winners of awards for sustainability, including the prestigious AIA Committee on the Environment Award.
